Adam Vincent in Humans Anonymous

"Hi my name is Adam...I've been a recovering human for 30 years."
Adam Vincent finally has the courage to accept he's a human and the wisdom to know that he can't do anything about it.

Working in aged care, coping with nervous breakdowns, lacking the self worth to eat strawberries, Adam celebrates his experience of being human in Humans Anonymous. This refreshingly honest show is a celebration of the human spirit that will encourage you to embrace your imperfections and realise that despite the word on the street we're going to be OK. It's a cathartic experience for anyone who has ever made a mistake and is willing to laugh at it. Chosen by NBC to perform in America on Last Comic Standing, Adam Vincent is a stand-up comic on the rise and Human's Anonymous is his most personal and hilarious work to date.

A year-long stint in the UK touring up and down England, Scotland and Wales allowed Adam to hone his craft in front of international audiences, helping him create his universal appeal. Twisting between the painfully real and the unthinkably surreal, Adam has forged his own style of emotive stand up that generates laughter from the gut and an energy that inspires.

"Keep an eye on this one." BBC
