Andrew McClelland's Guide to Being a Modern Gentleman

The world can seem an uncivilised place, but not when modern gentlemen are about. From well-mannered courtship to making a stylish cravat from a tea towel, Andrew McClelland can make you the very model of a modern major gentleman... or gentlelady. Whichever is appropriate. Modern manners need YOU!

2008 marks Andrew's 10th consecutive appearance at the Melbourne International Comedy Festival. A past winner of the Comedians' Choice Award, Andrew is also a four-time veteran of the Edinburgh Fringe festival. In 2007 he played sold out shows in Edinburgh, appeared on Spicks and Specks (ABC TV) and became a regular contributor to JMAG.

Andrew's past shows have covered topics as diverse as the history of pirates, secret societies, constructing the perfect mix tape and improving the world, generally. This year he turns his considerable comedic attention to manners, etiquette and style in the post-facebook world.

"Utterly lovely and hilariously funny at the same time." Metro (U.K)

"immeasurably enjoyable...praise comes as easily as the belly-laugh."
