

CABARET

Geraldine Quinn – Dumb Things

Directed by Paul McCarthy

'Non je ne regrette rien', sang Edith Piaf. All very well for a drug-addled, bald, dead French singing dwarf, but what about clumsy, gullible, ginger musical comedians? Regret's the refuge of the underachiever, and Geraldine Quinn (Bad Ambassador, SEXDEATHBOWIE) has enough to spread around.

From the plain stupid to the blithely innocent, this little Quinny makes mistakes. Dumb Things explores the failings, faux pas' and embarrassments which make up her stain on history. It's the rock-cabaret for everyone who's tripped over it, run into it, offended it, put feet in it or royally cocked it up.

Quinn began performing around Australia and the UK in 2005 and swiftly made a name for herself as a mighty singer with macabre wit. She was twice selected in Edinburgh to be part of Pick of the Fringe and performed in the David Letterman Showcase in 2006. In 2007 she won the Best Emerging Cabaret Artiste Green Room Award and was nominated for Original Songs.

Directed by Paul McCarthy (Fiona Scott-Norman's The Needle and the Damage Done), this is Quinn's most revealing show. Make a date to see the melodic martinet today, before her misdemeanours catch up with her.
